This is an image of two women and two men hiking on the top of a mountain. In her grey-white T-shirt and black grey shorts, the first girl is sitting on a rock in the bottom left-hand corner. The first man in his red-orange T-shirt is also sitting on a rock to the first woman's left. The second woman is behind the first man. Because she's too small in the photograph, I cannot describe anything about her. Lastly, the second man in his blue T-shirt walks from the back to the front. Interestingly enough, all of them are wearing a cap and reading something. One more thing that lures my attention is that there are only rocks and bushes on the mountain where the four people are resting and no snow. In contrast, the ranges of mountains in the top right-hand corner are snowy, and they look freezing. Furthermore, the sky is clear and beautiful; hence, I firmly reckon it's great to go hiking with friends.

A woman in her plum red dress and long brown hair is holding a smartphone to take a picture of her friends while others are posing. The fully-grown woman roughly in the bottom left-hand corner is holding an iPhone and using it like a professional camera to record a wonderful time with her friends, who look so delighted being with one another. Besides, there are tons of tables in the background full of customers who relax with their loved ones. To encapsulate, I strongly believe that it is a great day to hang out with our buddies.

Sample answer

Besides the crucial social issues that entertainment programs should aim to educate people, there are different diverse purposes. Therefore, I am utterly opposed to the statement for a number of vital reasons.

The first and foremost point is that every program is specifically designed for a group of audiences, and it has a unique purpose. A great example is that some of them only focus on helping people relax and enjoy their lives besides their working hours.

Additionally, there are a sea of other concerns that inhabitants should pay close attention to, such as politics, economics, education, and so on. Hence, social issues are only parts of the whole that people are responsible for tackling

All in all, I wholeheartedly reckon that it is definitely not necessary to educate people about social matters on every entertainment program. Instead, we should consider educating others on a wide range of subjects.

Sample answer

I am not sure how other people decide what to buy, but I do not care where the products come from as long as they meet a number of essential requirements.

The first and foremost point, local products and international ones need to have a strong brand and quality to draw all attention from consumers. It does not matter where the products come from if consumers feel safe when they and their loved ones use them.

Additionally, the cost of products is crucial because we are presently facing problems and serious effects from Covid-19 that have a severely awful impact on our financial aspect; therefore, a competitive price will stand a better chance of attracting consumers.

To wrap up, customers predominantly find products full of nutrition, safe, and with a competitive price compared to others. Hence, we can consider buying products based on the above criteria instead of where they are produced.

Some people say it is more important to plant trees in the open spaces in towns and cities than to build more housing. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Your response

Sample answer

In my humble position, I utterly concur with the notion that we should be planting trees in the available spaces instead of building more buildings for the good of all residents.

First of all, it is a well-known fact that megacities more often than not lack green trees to produce enough oxygen, which could be enormously detrimental to all residents' health. In the age of industrialization, more and more manufacturers are being built, while trees are being cut off. Therefore, we more than ever need trees in big cities to keep the air in good condition.

Moreover, people predominantly do not show affection to their beloved ones because they are frequently hectic with their jobs. Thus, parks full of trees could be an excellent choice for them and their family members. They can pay a visit to enjoy the fresh atmosphere but still show affection to their loved ones.

To encapsulate, I wholeheartedly recommend planting more trees instead of building up buildings owing to the presented points earlier.

Sample answer

In the age of modern and technological society, I am utterly opposed to the perspective that one-day computers will become more intelligent than humans for a myriad of critical reasons.

The first and foremost point is that computers are designed and developed by human beings. I mean that no matter what happens, people still have the capability and strength to tackle any computer-related issues. In other words, if we are able to build them from scratch, we will absolutely re-program them in case of revolution from computers.

Furthermore, people have been through billions of development and faced tons of severe issues, but we still ended up successfully. As a result, even one day, computers exceed the intelligence of human beings, and we will soon enough get rid of them for good.

All in all, I do not see any sign that computers will become more intelligent than people as I raised my points earlier.

Everybody on earth has the right to choose any kinds of sports they want to play. Therefore, I'm utterly hostile towards the statement for several core reasons.

To commence with, everything here is about human rights; hence, every single soul has all their right to make their decision even though it is so hazardous to them. Nonetheless, as long as it does not harm others, it would be completely okay. The ball is in their court, so we should not be involved in personal stuff.

Additionally, it is a well-known fact that there is no accounting for taste because we only live once in our lives. Specifically, perhaps to us that these kinds of sports are awful in our eyes, but to them, it is the opposite picture. In other words, people who love dangerous sports take it as something to relax and recharge energy after working their tails off on a daily basis.

Sample answer

Climate change has severely impacted our lives for the last few decades, so I am utterly hostile towards the idea that we should find a way to live with it for several critical reasons.

First of all, apparently that we all know how hazardous and dreadful climate change is, far less live with it because it is having more dangerous impacts on our lives day in day out. Specifically, climate change seemingly causes air pollution in most megacities, which leads to terminal illnesses in the years to come.

Additionally, it is a well-known fact that we will not be able to make a living on the planet if climate change continuously keeps getting worse, which is literally proved and analyzed by scientists so far. If worst comes to worst, we need to make our hard decision, that we need to relocate and live on other planets as a last resort.

In conclusion, I wholly believe that we should create strategies to deal with it beforehand, rather than put up and live with it."

Multinational firms have been making tremendous impacts on our lives recently for the good of our livelihood, so I utterly support the statement for two critical reasons.

To initiate with, the international firms will eventually open up a bunch of vacancies for residents on the earth. Apparently, inhabitants will have more opportunities to pursue their career path, and they will less likely compete with others.

In addition, it is a well-known fact that globalization gives human beings chances to work in overseas nations for a better future. To illustrate, I have a friend who has been working his tail off in the last couple of years and waiting patiently to acquire his turn to work for international firms. Sample answer

In the age of the internet, there are tons of information that we can see through TV advertisements day after day. However, I wholly believe there are pros and cons to TV advertisements.

To initiate with, it is a well-known fact that advertisements are one of the thousands of ways to give a brief understanding about new products and services. Thus, if you need something to fulfill your needs and you inadvertently see it through TV advertisements, in this way, it is definitely helpful for viewers.

Contrastingly, it would be too irritating if you keep seeing advertisements on the screen. Especially advertisements show misleading information about their products in an effort to cheat consumers. Because we predominantly cannot verify its quality; hence, the product owners will probably take advantage of it to benefit themselves.

Recapitulate, I firmly believe TV advertisements have both negative and positive sides to viewers. So, we need to be careful in terms of using advertisement information for reference.

Prison is the common way in most countries try to solve the problem of crime. However, a more effective solution is to provide people with a better education. Do you agree or disagree?

Your response

I utterly believe that we should be providing those who have committed crime education for a better life in the future besides punishing them in prison for a certain period of time.

First of all, if you want to stay on the top of your industry, you will need to work your tail off in order to achieve what you have set your heart for. Accurately, it is more difficult for criminals to find jobs after having themselves released from prison. Therefore, a well-rounded education would be absolutely beneficial for them in a long time.

On the other hand, prison is still efficient in keeping and training criminals to be better people when they are out of their prison, and it is much more essential initially when they just committed crimes. In reality, many cases are being proved that those who are kept in prison will likely act and live a more appropriate way than they did before.

It hinges on a person's profession and expertise to tell whether walking on the moon was a step forward for human beings or it only made little difference in most people's lives. To me, I am neutral.

To begin with, if you are a scientist or working in an industry related to science, then for sure that the first man had ever walked on the moon would be something extraordinarily spectacular, literally speaking. Accurately, scientists who have gained insightful knowledge concerning universal planets understand better than ordinary inhabitants.

Contrastingly, to those who work in offices or manufacturers, that new definitely is not going to make any significant difference because it does not have a clear impact on most people's lives at the time being. Ordinary workers predominantly pay attention to simple concerns, such as necessities, food, entertainment, and medical treatment.

Sample answer

In my lovely country, most people suffer from COVID-19, especially those low-income individuals and families all over the nation. Hence, the government offers two public assistance to help residents cope with the pandemic. First and foremost, there is a financial budget for people who have lost their profession due to COVID-19. They will be receiving an amount of support money on a monthly basis until the pandemic is under control. Furthermore, residents who got affected by COVID-19 receive free treatments from the Health Ministry, including drugs and medical facilities in hospitals if their health is severely serious.

My country is still developing; thus, there is a sea of unfortunate and underprivileged individuals who need support from their government more than anyone else. So, those people can benefit most from public assistance. However, the government also benefits itself because they support their citizens, who will be contributing to the whole country in the years to come.

Regarding positive results, public assistance has made a huge impact on people's lives, especially low-income individuals and families; they have undergone the pandemic for a long time. Contrastingly, there are some negative aspects, and the most detectable one is that some sets of people take advantage of it to benefit themselves. Hence, I utterly suggest that the government should have proper plans to control and manage the quality of their assistance, so they can advance its merits and prevent its demerits.

I got my first opportunity to Taiwan back at the end of 2019, right before the COVID-19 emerged, which was absolutely lucky for me. At that time, I paid a visit to Taiwan alone for two crucial reasons. First and foremost, I have been in love with Taiwan since I was a little child through the words of my aunts because she got married and has a family there. Additionally, I would like to utilize that chance to visit my aunt as she has not been back to my country for years. Thus, I was honestly excited to see lots of things.

When it comes to interesting things about Taiwan, they were its people and weather. Regarding people, I was truly impressed by how friendly and supportive they were towards foreigners.
